FOREWORD

This shorthand dictionary is divided into three parts:

Part One contains, in alphabetic order, the shorthand outlines for 26,098 words. These 26,098 words, however, represent a considerably larger vocabulary, as many simple derivatives—those ending in -ing and -s, for example, which present no stenographic problem—have been omitted.

Part Two contains, in alphabetic order, the shorthand outlines for 2,604 entries for personal and geographical names.

Part Three consists of a list of 72 shorthand outlines for abbreviations such as f.o.b. and C.O.D.

It is easily possible to construct briefer outlines for many of the scientific and literary words for which full outlines are given in this dictionary. It is not advisable to do so, however, unless the writer is certain that he will use those briefer outlines with sufficient frequency to justify the effort of learning them. Otherwise, the brief but half-remembered outline will cause mental hesitation that will result in slower rather than faster writing.

The experience of expert shorthand writers of every system is conclusive in establishing the inadvisability of attempting to gain speed by devising and learning lists of brief outlines. Longer outlines that are quickly constructed by the mind under pressure of dictation give the writer more speed; the attempt to remember and use large numbers of abbreviated outlines tends to reduce the writer's speed.

It is hoped that this volume will render a useful service to the shorthand writer by placing at his disposal a facile and fluent outline for any word in which he may be interested.

The Publishers

PART ONE

Part One of this dictionary contains 26,098 word entries alphabetically arranged.

Experience has proved that those using a shorthand dictionary often consult it for the simple words formerly omitted from shorthand dictionaries or for rare and unusual words likewise formerly omitted.

The present list, therefore, includes many of the apparently simple words formerly omitted. It includes many of the simple derivatives formerly omitted. Most readily apparent will be the addition of the many rare and unusual words that experience has proved are wanted by users of such a list as this.

Many words are included because the shorthand learner, while still in school, has occasion to use them in his schoolwork. For this reason, many mathematical, mineralogical, chemical, physical, botanical, and physiological terms are included. For the same reason, many literary words are included, words that are of no business value but that the high school or college learner uses in schoolwork. The bulk of the vocabulary, however, consists of words used in business-office dictation.

Consistency, rather than brevity of outline, has been the guiding principle in the construction of the shorthand outlines in this Gregg Shorthand Dictionary Simplified. The fastest shorthand outline (within reasonable limits) is the outline that requires the least mental effort, the outline that is written consistently and analogically. The speed of a shorthand outline is not to be judged by its brevity to the eye, nor even by its facility for the hand; it is to be judged by the speed with which it may be constructed by the mind and supplied by the mind to the hand.

PART TWO

PERSONAL AND GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES

Part Two consists of 2,604 entries of personal and geographical names divided approximately as follows:

1,600 geographical names. The largest group of names consists of the names of American cities and towns that are likely to be encountered in business dictation. The names of the American states and territories are given. A relatively small group of foreign geographical names is given—the foreign countries and cities that are most likely to occur in American business dictation. The lists are not intended to be complete or exhaustive. The attempt has been made, however, to include the geographical names that occur most frequently in ordinary business dictation.

350 surnames. This small group of last names represents the commonest American last names that are likely to be used in business dictation. There are tens of thousands of surnames in this country, and no attempt can be made to present a complete list.

350 first names of women. This list contains the more frequently used feminine first names.

350 first names of men. This list contains the more frequently used masculine first names.

The four groups of names listed above are combined in one alphabetical list in Part Two.

With the exception of the states and of a few of the largest cities, the geographical names are written very fully. This is done with the understanding that the writer will use these full outlines for the names that occur only occasionally in the dictation. When some name occurs more frequently in the dictation, an abbreviated form will be used.

The shorthand writer in Oregon would ordinarily have little occasion to use the outline for Corpus Christi. The Texan shorthand writer might use it so frequently that he would abbreviate it to kk.

In order to keep the list in Part Two as short and at the same time as useful as possible the names of many cities and towns are omitted. This is possible because many American city and town names are composed of nouns and adjectives that appear in Part One—such names as White River Junction or Egg Harbor City.

Many cities and towns form their names by adding to the name of another town a word like Beach, Grove, Hill, City, Park, or Spring. In most cases such names have been omitted as they would cause no shorthand writing difficulty.
